Structure of This Presentation

• Why write for publication?
• What is peer review?
• What outcomes might result from peer review?
• Opportunities to enhance acceptance

Why Do We Write for Publication?

- Dissemination of research findings
- Stimulate debate
- Expectation of peers and employers
- Prestige
- Credibility with colleagues
- Financial incentives
Writing for publication perceived to be different from other forms of writing

(Grant et al 2010)
Different Forms of Writing for Publication

- Twitter
- Facebook
- Blogs
- Newsletters
- Book reviews
- Practitioner accounts

Writing Academic Papers Is Different

- Level of rigour when writing is higher
- Expected to support statements with references
- Contextualise what is known about the subject and any gaps in the evidence
- How does your manuscript adds to the body of knowledge
What is Peer Review?

‘Peer review is the process by which reports of, or proposals for, research are scrutinised by other researchers.’

(Committee of Publisher Ethics 2011)
What is the Purpose of Peer Review?

• To ensure that only the best quality manuscripts are published
• To provide constructive feedback on how a manuscript can be further developed
What Are the Potential Outcomes of a Peer Review?

• Four potential outcomes
  – Accept
  – Major revisions
  – Minor revisions
  – Reject

Outcome 1: Accepted

• A cause for celebration!
• I’ve never known a peer reviewed manuscript be accepted at first submission
• Usually a journey...

Outcome 2: Minor Revisions

“A recommendation of minor revision should be made if the manuscript is likely to be of interest to the HILJ readership but typographical errors or incomplete references are present.”

(S1M 2011)
Outcome 3: Major Revisions

“A recommendation of a major revision should be made if the manuscript is likely to be of interest to the HILJ readership but requires a reworking in terms of structure or the inclusion of additional materials.”

(S1M 2011)
What To Do When You Receive Referee/s Comments?

• Take a deep breath
  – Read the comments
  – Put the manuscript aside
  – Discuss them with your co-author/s
  – Respond positively to each point raised

• Remember, very few manuscripts are accepted without any revisions
Outcome 4: Rejected

“A recommendation to reject a manuscript should be made if the manuscript is unlikely to be relevant/of interest to the HILJ readership or is not sufficiently rigorous to be suitable for publication in an academic journal.”

(S1M 2011)
Reasons a Manuscript Might Be Rejected

- Out of scope
  - Topic area or format
- Insufficiently developed
  - Bullet points
  - May show promise...
- Plagiarism
- Not responding to referee/s comments

Plagiarism

• “Take (the work or idea of someone else) and pretend it is one’s own.” (Fowler, Pocket OED 2002)

• “Direct quotes” or in your own words but the source must be acknowledged

What Can You Do to Enhance the Chances of Your Manuscript Being Accepted for Publication?

1. Audience
2. Message
3. Editorial Team
4. Guidelines
5. Published Papers
6. Setting the Context
7. Experienced Colleagues
8. Chinese Scholars Network
Consider Your Audience

• Academic vs. Practitioner publications
  – HILJ vs. HLG Newsletter
• Journals each have defined and unique scope
• Imagine an individual you are writing for...

What is the ‘Take Home’ Message?

• Not only what you want to say
• What can the readers of your manuscript usefully apply to their own practice?

http://bit.ly/nS9QxS
Editorial Team

• Not sure if your manuscript fits the scope of a journal...

Author Guidelines

• Read the guidelines... and then follow them
• Guidelines will help you determine:
  – In scope
  – Structured abstract
  – Structure of the manuscript
  – Word count
  – Referencing style

Looks at Past Issues

• Learn from people who have already been through the process

Setting the Context

• Literature review
  – What is known about the subject area?
  – What are the gaps identified in the literature?
  – How does your manuscript address this gap?
  – International context

Experienced Colleagues

• Learn from colleagues with publishing experience
  – Writing together
  – Editing and advising
• English as a second language
The Chinese Scholars Network

www.chinesescholarsnetwork.com
Purpose of the Chinese Scholars Network

• To offer a service to the Mandarin-speaking community in terms of help/advice in developing a manuscript for publication
• Attract the best Chinese-language papers for our journals
For Mandarin-speaking scholars, the Chinese Scholars Network provides a content-rich resource, all free, all the time.
