

University of Salford
MANCHESTER

Sun battles fog : fog wins

Hurley, UK

Title	Sun battles fog : fog wins
Authors	Hurley, UK
Type	Article
URL	This version is available at: http://usir.salford.ac.uk/id/eprint/1980/
Published Date	2006

USIR is a digital collection of the research output of the University of Salford. Where copyright permits, full text material held in the repository is made freely available online and can be read, downloaded and copied for non-commercial private study or research purposes. Please check the manuscript for any further copyright restrictions.

For more information, including our policy and submission procedure, please contact the Repository Team at: usir@salford.ac.uk.

But rather than try to wipe my mind with smoke
I should just remember all the times I beat your arse at poker.
When I was slim and you were soft,
when you fell asleep with your face in my cunt,
the time you shat the bed.
Make the Satsuma shrink as though the juice
had been sucked out,
feel its skin slip sadly down my spine.

by Tamara Fulcher

Sun battles fog: fog wins

An etcher has been abroad
this night,
burning ferns into windows.

Pigeons swarm around a slurry of rice and gravy.

He moves to avoid me,
I move to avoid him:
we touch.

Red cars line the gutter,
one with smashed lights,
paisley rabbit poised on dashboard.

The blue of distant mountains brought close on laminated buds.

Ursula Hurley