After a long walk above Hebden Bridge darkness down from the knoll winding through the trees like smoke

so tired we stop
 to sit on a bench
 and eat apples

Farewell

Headlights
a wave petals falling
in the dark

Sunrise Sunset

Sunrise: dark tears reveals grey webbing starlit salmon pale roses reflected still pools on turf wound
with ultra-violet ditches glimmering in muddy beds

Sunset: clouded now velvet canopy flushed dusky mushroom gills breathe burnished air sky melting in the beaten copper of the Mersey -
 here is peace
